

Overview:
The Game class creates the players then generates the board.
A listener for a move is created for each player.
The players color is determined by the order in the Player array.
A player can make have a move on hold that is sent when it is their turn. In this case, the move will be validated twice, once when made and held, then again before being sent
The move translator translates the position string for interpretation.